THE FABRIC · ENTRY-LEVEL VS PRO-LB

It starts with the fibre.

You know two jerseys can look identical on the hanger and be completely different garments after ten washes and twenty matches. The difference is engineered long before the print goes on, in the fibre, the yarn and the knit. This is what separates an entry-level fabric from a Pro-LB fabric.

Macro: tight filament knit with sweat beading on the face before it is pulled through and spread

FIBRE: FILAMENT VS SPUN

Entry-level knits often use spun or coarse low-filament polyester. Short fibres leave loose ends at the surface, which is where pilling and the tired "fuzzy" look begin. Pro fabric uses continuous-filament, microdenier polyester (under 1 denier per filament): a smoother hand, a cleaner print surface and more capillary channels. Well-specified recycled polyester (rPET) performs like virgin filament.

STRETCH & RECOVERY

Mechanical stretch comes from the knit and textured yarns. It breathes and lasts, but it recovers less. Elastane (typically 5–20% in performance knits) gives true two- or four-way stretch with recovery, so the garment returns to shape instead of bagging at the elbows, seat and knees. Recovery, not stretch, is what separates pro from cheap.

COLOUR: WHY SUBLIMATION LASTS

Sublimation disperse dyes turn to gas under heat and pressure and diffuse into the polyester fibre. There is no ink film on top to crack or peel. Depth and fastness depend on polyester quality, transfer temperature, dwell time and pressure. Fastness is graded on the grey scale (1–5) for wash (ISO 105-C06), rub (ISO 105-X12), perspiration (ISO 105-E04) and chlorinated water (ISO 105-E03), and on the blue-wool scale (1–8) for light (ISO 105-B02).

KNIT STRUCTURE

Single jersey: light, one technical face, prone to curl and distortion. Interlock: double-knit, stable, opaque, holds its shape. Mesh, eyelet and birdseye: open structures mapped to heat zones. Warp knits resist runs and distortion; weft knits stretch more freely. Pro kit puts the right structure in the right zone instead of one fabric everywhere.

WICKING & AIRFLOW

Polyester's moisture regain is about 0.4%, against roughly 8% for cotton: the fibre itself holds almost no water. Wicking is capillary action along the channels between filaments. Finer filaments move sweat faster, and a durable hydrophilic finish pulls it to the outer face to spread and evaporate. Cheap finishes wash out, and the fabric stops working halfway through the season. Air permeability (ISO 9237) then decides how fast the heat leaves.

WEIGHT & YARN

GSM is a tool, not a boast. Too light and a garment goes sheer and loses shape; too heavy and it carries heat and water. A pro specification sets weight per garment and per panel (light for running and netball, dense and tight for rugby contact zones, brushed-back for warm layers) and matches it to the yarn: 75D, 100D or 150D filament, with the filament count that gives the hand you want.

PILLING, ABRASION & SHRINKAGE

Pilling is graded 1–5 after Martindale rubbing (ISO 12945-2). Abrasion is measured in Martindale cycles to breakdown (ISO 12947-2). Filament yarns, tight constructions and correct finishing pill less and scuff more slowly. Properly heat-set fabric stays true to size after washing (ISO 5077 / ISO 6330); poorly stabilised fabric shrinks or twists, and your size run stops matching.

	Entry-level kit (typical)	Pro-LB standard
Fibre	Spun or coarse polyester	Continuous-filament microdenier polyester
Knit	One fabric everywhere	Structure per zone: interlock, mesh, birdseye, warp knit
Weight	Whatever is cheapest	Specified per garment and per panel
Stretch	Mechanical only; bags out	Engineered stretch with recovery, elastane where it counts
Moisture	Finish washes out	Capillary yarns plus a durable hydrophilic finish
Surface	Pills and scuffs early	Low-pill, abrasion-resistant constructions
Colour	Dull and faded after washing	Deep sublimation, fully penetrated into the fibre
After washing	Shrinks, twists, loses size	Heat-set and dimensionally stable

RUGBY JERSEY DEEP-DIVE

WHAT YOU ARE PAYING FOR

Pro-brand quality, on the same level as the top international sportswear labels: premium performance fabrics, premium zips, trims and accessories, and rich full-colour sublimation that will not crack, peel or fade.

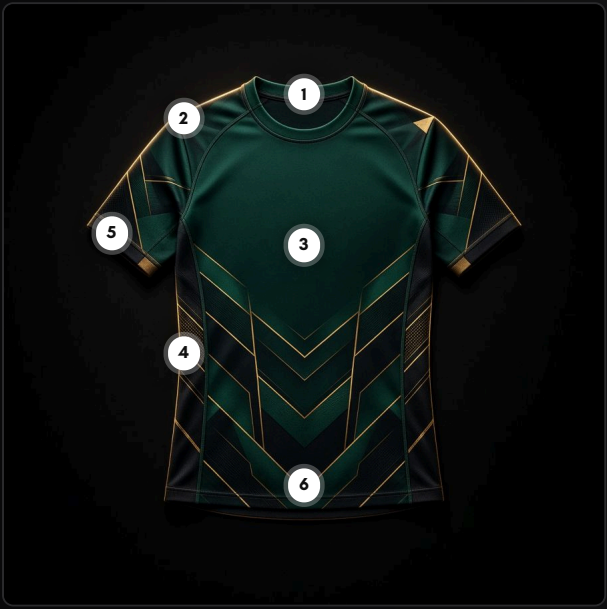

Prices shown = starting price per unit at MOQ 5, ex VAT · bulk discounts up to 20% · plus sizes: +R60 per two sizes above XL (2XL–3XL +R60 · 4XL–5XL +R120 · 6XL–7XL +R180)

RUGBY JERSEY DEEP-DIVE

The international-standard rugby jersey.

A general rugby jersey is a printed T-shirt with a collar. An international-standard jersey is equipment. At the top level, jerseys have moved from loose, heavy cotton to tight, smooth, body-mapped synthetics, for one reason: what the opposition cannot hold, they cannot stop.

1. Collar. A low-profile, tightly ribbed or bound collar, reinforced at the neck. There is no loose collar to grab, and the neckline is not stretched out by mid-season.
2. Shoulders. Reinforced shoulder construction, with seams moved off the point of the shoulder where scrum, tackle and carry loads land.
3. Tight knit. A smooth-faced, tight-knit filament polyester that is harder to grip and resists snags and abrasion on grass and artificial turf.
4. Body-mapped fit. Cut close to the body, so there is less loose fabric for a defender to grab, hold or drag back.
5. Stretch & recovery. Elastane-rich zones that move through tackles, rucks and lineout extension, then spring back to shape.
6. Grip & hem. Silicone grip prints can be placed on the front for ball security where specified. A stable hem stays tucked and flat.

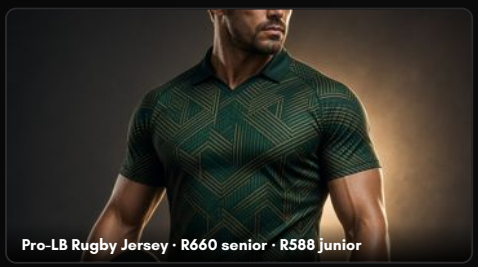

THE WET-WEIGHT PROBLEM

A cotton-rich or loose, heavy jersey soaks up sweat and rain and gets heavier as the match goes on. Low-regain filament polyester sheds water and dries fast, so the jersey at minute 75 weighs close to what it weighed at kick-off.

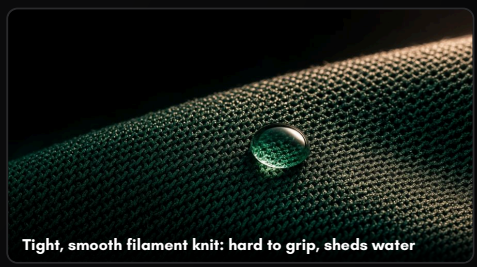

A FULL SEASON, NOT A FEW WEEKS

Flat seams and bar-tacks at high-load points, a shape that recovers after every tackle, and sublimation that sits inside the fibre. Numbers, sponsors and colours stay sharp through a full season of contact and washing.

	General jersey	International standard · Pro-LB
Fit	Loose, boxy, easy to grab	Body-mapped, close fit
Fabric	Open or spun knit that snags and pills	Tight, smooth filament knit, abrasion-resistant
Collar & shoulders	Soft collar that stretches; plain shoulder seam	Reinforced low-profile collar and reinforced shoulders
Movement	Stretches, then stays stretched	Stretch with recovery for tackling and lifting
When wet	Heavy and clinging	Light, sheds water, dries fast
Print	Fades and dulls	Rich sublimation that will not crack, peel or fade

4 & 9 Panel Rugby Shorts · R700 senior

Tight, smooth filament knit: hard to grip, sheds water

THE HIDDEN COST OF A CHEAP JERSEY

You do not save money; you pay later. You buy replacement sets mid-season. The kit in the team photo is faded and stretched, in front of sponsors, parents and the opposition. Players get dragged back by loose fabric, carry extra water weight and chafe at the seams. Your team is judged before kick-off, by how it looks walking out of the tunnel.

WHAT YOU ARE PAYING FOR

Pro-brand quality, on the same level as the top international sportswear labels: premium performance fabrics, premium zips, trims and accessories, and rich full-colour sublimation that will not crack, peel or fade.

Prices shown = starting price per unit at MOQ 5, ex VAT · bulk discounts up to 20% · plus sizes: +R60 per two sizes above XL (2XL–3XL +R60 · 4XL–5XL +R120 · 6XL–7XL +R180)

Sizes 1-2 to 7XL · custom sizing welcome · standard lead time 15 working days from order to delivery (30 working days for orders over 1,000 units)

PATTERN STRUCTURE

Cut for the athlete, not the hanger.

> Fabric is only half the garment. The other half is the pattern, and this is where most budget kit cuts corners: one generic block, stretched up and down the size run, with seams wherever they are cheapest to sew.

Ergonomic pattern pieces: curved raglan, articulated sleeve and side panels

THE ATHLETIC BLOCK

Base patterns are drafted on athletic proportions: a stronger shoulder-to-waist drop, a longer back and room in the upper arm and thigh. A generic fashion block is cut for standing still.

RAGLAN VS SET-IN

Raglan: a diagonal seam from neck to underarm gives unrestricted shoulder rotation with no seam on the shoulder point. It suits contact and throwing sports. Set-in: a sharper, tailored shoulder line for golfers, button-ups and jackets.

ERGONOMIC PANELLING

Panels follow the muscles and the direction of movement, so the fabric works with the body. Panel lines also let us place mesh and ventilation exactly where heat builds up.

ARTICULATED SLEEVES

Pre-curved sleeves and elbow shaping let the arm rest in its natural forward position. There is less drag when reaching, passing and swinging, and no twisting sleeve seam.

GRADING DISCIPLINE

Every size from 1-2 to 7XL is graded with proportional rules, not simply scaled. Artwork is placed per size, so the junior and the 7XL look like the same design.

SEAM PLACEMENT

Seams sit away from contact and abrasion zones: off the top of the shoulder, off the spine and out of the underarm friction line. Seams are flat wherever they touch skin.

Sport	Ease & fit intent
Rugby	Close, near-compression fit with minimal ease and nothing to grab
Netball & hockey	Fitted bodice with freedom at the hip and hem for lunging and pivoting
Soccer & basketball	Athletic fit with light ease for airflow and full arm swing
Golf	Set-in tailored shoulder with ease across the back for swing rotation
Cycling	Race fit with a longer back and a shorter front for the riding position
Running	Minimal fabric, with ease only where it ventilates
Jackets & tracksuits	Layering ease without bulk; structured shoulder and clean taper

JACKETS DEEP-DIVE

A jacket changes how a team looks.

Put two teams in the same function room: same people, different jackets. One looks like a squad, the other looks like a club that bought what was on special. The difference is not the logo. It is construction, shape and finish, and the Milton jacket is where you see it first.

1. Collar stand. A firm rib or stand that holds its shape frames the face. Cheap collars collapse, curl and look tired by the second month.
2. Shoulder line. A clean, defined shoulder point gives the frame width. The torso reads athletic and confident, not slumped.
3. Sleeve pitch. Sleeves are set at the angle the arm actually hangs (forward pitch): no twisting and no diagonal drag lines across the upper arm.
4. Studs & zips. Solid metal studs that close with a positive snap, and smooth auto-lock zips that run first time, every time.
5. Body fabric. The Milton has a dense, smooth body fabric that holds its structure and keeps its line all day.
6. Tapered waist & rib hem. The waist follows the body and a firm rib hem keeps the line sharp instead of boxy.

FABRIC HAND & DRAPE

Softshell: a bonded face fabric with a brushed or fleece back. It is wind-resistant and water-repellent, and drapes without bagging. Brushed-back knits for hoodies and tracksuits are warm and soft inside and clean outside. Quilted and insulated linings add warmth without turning the silhouette into a sleeping bag.

HOW IT CHANGES THE WAY YOU LOOK

Structure does what a good suit does: it squares the shoulders, slims the waist and lengthens the line. A team or staff in a sharp jacket looks more expensive, and that perception transfers to the name on the chest. Parents see a school that invests. Sponsors see a team worth backing. Clients see a company that takes itself seriously.

WHAT A CHEAP JACKET REALLY COSTS

It looks fine on delivery day. Then the cuffs pill, the collar loses its shape, a zip jams, and the sleeves twist after the first wash. Your team wears that image all winter: at every away game, every prize-giving and every photo. People decide what you are worth in seconds, and the jacket answers first.

WHAT YOU ARE PAYING FOR

Pro-brand quality, on the same level as the top international sportswear labels: premium performance fabrics, premium zips, trims and accessories, and rich full-colour sublimation that will not crack, peel or fade.

TRIMS & ACCESSORIES

The details decide how long it lasts.

Fabric gets the attention, but trims decide how long a garment survives. A zip that splits or a seam that pops ends a garment's life long before the fabric wears out. Pro-LB specifies trims at the level of the top international labels.

Coil zip with metal auto-lock slider, cover-stitched seam and bar-tack

ZIPS: COIL, MOULDED, METAL

Coil (nylon spiral): flexible and light, smooth on curves. Ideal for ¼ zips, tracksuit tops and softshells. Moulded (individual plastic teeth): strong lateral strength with a sporty look, for jackets and puffers. Metal: the classic, heavy-duty choice for Milton and baseball styles.

GAUGE & SLIDERS

Gauge is roughly the chain width in mm when closed: #3 for necks and pockets, #5 for most tops and jackets, #8 for heavy outerwear. Auto-lock sliders hold position instead of creeping open. A zip garage at the chin protects the skin.

SEAMS: OVERLOCK, FLATLOCK, COVERSTITCH

Overlock (3-, 4- or 5-thread): a strong, stretchy edge seam. Flatlock: edges butted and stitched flat, with no ridge against the skin, for close-fit and compression kit. Coverstitch: two or three needles over a looper on hems and binding, giving a neat finish with stretch.

BAR-TACKS & SEAM STRENGTH

Dense zig-zag bar-tacks reinforce pocket corners, zip ends and stress points. Seam strength is a measurable property (ISO 13935-2, grab method). In knits, the seam must also stretch and recover with the fabric, or it cracks.

ELASTICS & GRIPPERS

Woven elastic is firm and holds its width. Knitted elastic is soft and wide. Braided elastic narrows when stretched, which is why budget waistbands roll. Plush-back elastics add comfort. Silicone grippers at hems and leg openings keep cycling and compression kit in place.

BONDED SEAMS & LABELS

Bonded and taped seams join panels with heat-activated film instead of thread, giving less bulk, a clean face and a sealed join on softshells. Heat-transfer labels print size and care straight onto the garment: no scratchy neck tag, nothing to cut out.

Trim	Entry-level kit (typical)	Pro-LB standard
Zips	Light, unbranded, no lock; teeth split	Correct type and gauge per garment, auto-lock slider
Seams	Single overlock everywhere	Flatlock, coverstitch and overlock, each where it belongs
Stress points	Unreinforced	Bar-tacked
Elastic	Braided; rolls and loses grip	Woven or plush-back, silicone gripper where needed
Labels	Sewn-in scratchy tag	Heat-transfer, tagless

WHY TEAMS MOVE UP TO PRO-LB

It outlasts the season

You buy it once and it still looks like new when the next intake arrives.

It looks expensive

Deep colour, a sharp silhouette and premium trims. You notice it in every photo.

It feels better

It is lighter when wet, has flat seams against the skin and moves with the body.

It says who you are

Teams that look serious get taken seriously by opponents, parents and sponsors.

THE INTERNATIONAL STANDARD

Built to the benchmark the pros are measured by.

International sportswear brands and their mills specify performance kit against published test methods. These are the benchmarks Pro-LB is built around: the same language the pros use to define quality. If you know these methods, you know what to ask of any kit supplier.

Benchmark testing: abrasion and pilling heads, grey-scale assessment, magnified inspection
